D.S. al fine

It's been years now since we said good-bye I don't need the photo of our honey-moon smiles—It's still there in my heart, just behind a layer There you are, in mossy up-land hills— In-di-go days of meadow top chills Where I'll always have you and keep you near— The feel of your arms, so strong, so complete, The warmth of your hands pulling me, through fields See-ing each side—of the place we all go—You call my name, to share the edge of the world Earth, sky, sea, we are so big, so small The edges are blurred now, it was so long a-go— The quiet face that fades a-way. The drooping bloom that fades a-way
 The dancing shadow that fades a-way The disappearing kiss that fades a-way Dia-monds glint—in their pla-ces Hearts— set-tle in their pla-ces. Stars sit—at their— pla-ces. The past fades to dis-tant— pla-ces—
 To-day I get married you'd like him, I know So diff-erent of course, how could I ev-er lose you He lost some-one too, so long a - go— Now, un-der late sum-mer stars, where you are
 We share a toast to the loved ones we've lost Our hearts so big, of love and sor-row, Of hope and loss—
